

COLLEGE OF COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION LAWYERS

January 29, 2009

To Whom It May Concern:

Choosing an attorney to represent your community association is one of the most important decisions a board of directors must make. It is a decision that should be made only after the completion of a thorough analysis of an attorney's qualifications, especially the number of years of experience specializing in the practice of community association law.

I am writing in my capacity as the Dean of the College of Community Association Lawyers to make you aware of Mr. Steven Sugarman's unique qualifications. Mr. Sugarman has distinguished himself from the thousands of attorneys who practice community association law. He is one of just over 100 attorneys in the United States to be inducted into the College of Community Association Lawyers. Membership in the College is highly selective. It is an honor conferred by the College's Board of Governors only after a rigorous review of an attorney's credentials and experience. Eligibility for consideration for membership requires an attorney to have a minimum of seven years experience specializing in the practice of community association law. A successful candidate must also have published a significant number of scholarly writings, held leadership positions with CAI and taught classes and seminars.

I encourage you to review Mr. Sugarman's credentials. When you do, you will recognize Mr. Sugarman's significant accomplishments that distinguish him from other community association attorneys.

I am pleased to inform you of Mr. Sugarman's membership in the College. Selecting Mr. Sugarman to represent your association ensures it will be represented by one of the best community association attorneys in the country.

Sincerely,

George E. Nowack, Jr.
